1. The first part of the document is a letter from the President of the United States to the Congress, dated January 1, 1861. It is a very important document, as it is the first official communication of the new President to the Congress. The letter is written in a very formal and dignified style, and it contains many important points. The President begins by expressing his pleasure in being able to take the oath of office, and then he goes on to discuss the state of the Union. He mentions the recent election, and the fact that the Union is now united under a new President. He then discusses the state of the country, and the various problems that it is facing. He mentions the issue of slavery, and the fact that it is a very important and controversial issue. He also mentions the issue of the Texas Annexation, and the fact that it is a very important and controversial issue. The President concludes the letter by expressing his confidence in the Congress, and his belief that they will be able to solve all the problems of the country.

Sneyd, Charlotte Augusta, translator.

*2416.37=G.3712.27

Relation, A, or rather a true account, of the island of England; with sundry particulars of the customs of these people, and of the royal revenues under King Henry the Seventh, about the year 1500. Translated from the Italian, with notes, by Charlotte Augusta Sneyd.

London. 1847. xviii, 135 pp. [Camden Society. No. 37] Sm. 4°. The Italian text is carried along throughout as a footnote to the English. The editor conjectures that this Relazione o più tosto raguaglio dell' isola d'Inghilterra was written not by the secretary of Francesco Cappello, the first Venetian ambassador on record, to England, but by some one just prior to his time.

A list is given of Venetian ambassadors to England.

1. The first part of the year was spent in the field, collecting specimens and making observations on the habits of the various birds and mammals of the region. The weather was generally favorable, but there were some heavy rains in the latter part of the season.

2. The second part of the year was spent in the laboratory, preparing the specimens and writing up the notes. The work was very tedious, but it was necessary to do it in order to have a complete record of the year's work.

3. The third part of the year was spent in the field again, making a few more collections and observations. The weather was not so good as in the first part of the year, but the work was still done.

4. The fourth part of the year was spent in the laboratory, preparing the specimens and writing up the notes. The work was very tedious, but it was necessary to do it in order to have a complete record of the year's work.
